

THE HISTORY

The Victorian is a bar inspired by the rich history of the Driskill Hotel and the spirit of the late 1800s.

In 1884, Colonel Jesse Driskill, a cattle baron and businessman, purchased the corner lot at Brazos and Pecan Street (now Sixth Street) for $7,500. Two years later, the Driskill Hotel opened its doors. Built at a cost of $400,000—equivalent to roughly $92 million today—the hotel was hailed by the Daily Statesman as “one of the finest hotels in the whole country.”

The space now home to The Victorian has lived many lives: part of the original lobby, the American National Bank of Austin, a barbershop and women’s spa, KTBC Studios (owned by Lady Bird Johnson) in the 1950s, and Scandals nightclub in the 1980s, before later serving as a private events venue.

Reimagined by MML Hospitality, The Victorian celebrates this layered past. Channeling the energy of Old West saloons and the charm of classic pubs, it’s now a lively gathering place for cocktails, Texas-inspired fare, and live country music.
